

Audrey Rothstein

Photography

Long ago, I wanted to quit college and become a photographer. No surprise, that didn't go over well with my parents. So, I stayed in school, studied Journalism, and enjoyed a fulfilling first career in nonprofit communications and association management. I often directed photographers to achieve the results that helped my organization best tell our story. After 25 years in the nonprofit sector, I was fortunate to begin a second rewarding career as a portrait, family, and event photographer. Now, well into that career, I enjoy capturing once-in-a-lifetime moments, focusing on what makes them unique and memorable. I also use photography in my volunteer work to advocate for causes I believe in and to tell the story of organizations that do great work. I've focused on childhood grief for many years, reflecting my own family's path. Volunteering with several children's grief camps, I work to photograph the moments when the campers form bonds with each other and see that their lives will go on following the death of a parent.

Website: www.audreyrothstein.com

www.facebook.com/audrey.rothstein